OUR WAY OF LIFE. Life in New Testament times is pretty much the same as Life in Old Testament times. Our trust in God is based on the knowledge that God always save us and will never let us down, as long as we humble ourselves and go back to him when we fail; we most certainly will fail as we are human, not angels. God allows us to fail so that we lose our human self-pride and brings us back to letting God have the glory.

A REFLECTION. If we have faith in God and trust him our lives can be an astonishing, joyful and peace-making adventure. There are many examples in scripture and many others in the lives people lead as described in the experience of Marisa and Agostino that comes later in the commentary on the Word of Life for this month: "Where your treasure is, there your heart will be also."

WORD OF LIFE For where your treasure is, there your heart will be also.

Western consumer society encourages us to accumulate material goods, to concentrate on our own needs and not bother about those of others. This is driven by the pursuit of personal well-being and efficiency. Yet St Luke, who wrote his Gospel in a very different cultural context, presents these words of Jesus as a decisive and universal teaching for men and women of all times and all places.

Luke's Gospel strongly emphasises the need for Jesus' disciples to make a radical, definitive and characteristic choice. God the Father is the true good, who must occupy a Christian's whole heart, following the example of Jesus himself. This exclusive choice brings with it a trusting abandonment to God's love and the chance of becoming truly "rich" because the children of God are heirs to his kingdom.

It is a question of freedom which means not letting ourselves be possessed by material goods, but really having control over them.

Material wealth, in fact, can occupy our "heart" and generate a growing anxiety to possess more, which can become real dependence. Instead, almsgiving, to which we are exhorted in this passage of the Gospel, is a matter of justice, dictated by mercy, which lightens the "heart" and opens us up to fraternal equality.

Every Christian personally, and the whole community of believers, can experience true freedom through sharing both material and spiritual goods with those who need them. This is the Christian lifestyle that bears witness to real trust in the Father and lays solid foundations for the civilization of love.
